

Becoming an RIBA Chartered Practice

Becoming an architect is a long and tough road, once you become qualified it is desirable for your hard work to become recognised. The Royal Institute of British Architects is a professional body that strives for excellence in architecture. The RIBA is a globally recognised company that oversees the quality of architecture as well as making sure that fairness is spread through the working environment, joining the RIBA allows us to put our company forward in different ways than before.

Benefits of being a chartered practice

Becoming an RIBA chartered practice has many benefits to our company, as a new company it can sometimes be hard to start up and build a good reputation, if we become an RIBA certified company it is immediately recognisable that have high standards of working and are a fair and ethical business.

Some benefits of becoming an RIBA Chartered Practice:

- Access to 'Find an Architect' service which has over 60,000 visitors a month
- Connect with other RIBA practices
- Access to toolbox with guidance on quality management, environmental management, health and safety, employment and equality
- Access to expert advice on legal issues
- Get high-quality business intelligence to see how your practice is performing against criteria such as profit, turnover, marketing spend, hourly rates and salaries

As we are a small business it is easy for us to make our director or partner an RIBA Chartered Member with them overseeing all architectural work. The in-depth criteria that we would need to pass would be worth our time to complete.

Being a RIBA Chartered Member

One of the criteria's for becoming an RIBA Chartered Practice is for one of our team members to become and RIBA Chartered Member. To become a member you need:

- RIBA Parts 1, 2 and 3

OR

- A qualification in architecture which is covered by the EU Professional Qualification Directive
- Access to the profession of architect in the EU country in which the qualification was gained
- A minimum of two years professional practice experience

As we have all completed our RIBA parts 1, 2 and 3 any of us could become Chartered Members. This step would be positive for our company because that member would receive many benefits from the title. These Include:

- Unlock hundreds of professional features on architecture.com
- Keep up with big issues and the small details for architecture and the built environment with desktop and mobile access to hundreds of RIBA Journal articles
- Help to deliver architectural workshops for thousands of children in schools all over the country
- Get a £200 voucher annually to spend at RIBA Academy to keep up with regulations, technology, and materials
- Access to the RIBA brand
